

We got offered some free tickets at the weekend to go down to see the Bournemouth Symphonic Orchestra Disco Spectacular. Some friends were going and we thought it would be laugh, not really expecting too much.

Two and a bit hours later, after a lot of white flares, afro's, and neon lights, we were plenty satisfied. And our 3 year old boy had the time of his life.

Beyond all expectations, we were treated to an orchestra who were awesome, fronted by 4 terrific singers who sang all to the music. The music was all disco disco disco. We had the requisite hits from Gloria Gaynor , Tina Turner, Lost in Music, Boogie nights and Jive Talkin.

And there were also some medleys from Bee Gees and our personal favourite - Boney M - with, among others - Brown Girl in the Ring, Ma Baker, Rasputin and Sunny (i think!).

The crowd were loving it, many having been there sunning, eating and drinking from 4pm. There was lots of fancy dress with plenty of glitter and platforms too, although you might have been forgiven for thinking you were at an 80's rave given the amount of neon. Whatever the outfit, one thing was for sure, that the crowd were up on their feet dancing away right up to the encore of those Village People classics of In The Navy and YMCA.

Accompanying the performances were some coloured flames being thrown from the side, smoke machines, laser lighting and Fireworks to round off a really really good night.

Check out their website below - I see they are doing another on the 12th August. I heartily recommend it! Get you flares, and afro's on and go along if you can - you won't regret it.
